The Center for Community-Based Primary Care has developed the Primary Care VMS program to ensure primary care physicians become a strong presence in their communities, capable of establishing and running practices that best serve the needs of their patients. By pairing mentees with experienced mentors, we are helping the next generation continue to create more communities with strong access to primary care.

Mentees gain access to highly skilled physician and business leaders who have been trained through our Primary Care Mentorship or Practice Management Mentorship programs. Both programs use the Team Mentoring Methodology licensed from the MIT Venture Mentoring Service (MIT VMS). In a trusted environment, you'll be able to learn more about their first-hand experiences within their roles and leverage their unique perspectives. They'll provide you with confidential advice across all aspects of business ownership and practice management.

Our goal is to help prepare the next generation of healthcare leaders so they can continue to improve access to the highest levels of primary care in all NC communities.
